ALLIES ARE GAINING HORRORS OF THE WAR AS SEEN BY CORRESPONDENT ON BATTLEFIELD

By EDWARD PRICE BELL. Correspondent of the Chicago News. London.-Moving stories of the ruin and ageny of war in central Belglum have been told me by l. A. McKenzle, editor of the London Weekly Times, best known for his work as a correspondent in the Japanese war and the Russian revolution. Obviously Mc-Konzle spoke henestly in every word he uttered, and like overy other oxperlenced war correspondent from Bel- With clenched fists he cried, 'Canalle! glum and France I have interviewed | Canalle!' he was numble to describe what he witnessed without an occasional reddening of the eyes and faltering of the

"I have seen savage war in many. isnds," said Mr. McKenzlo, "but never before naything like that which Belgium shows was done there. Oriental armies in the hour of victory or Russian troops when releutlessly suppressing internal rebellion were mild hinges. Still standing in place was and merelful compared with the treat- the religious statuary, which had been ment given to this people.

"The German plan of terrorism was enrefully enlculated and Germany does not deny this. Its aim is not alone to provent people from attempt. Mary, the Christ and the attendant ing to break the lines of communication in Belgium, but even more so to alarm the neighboring Dutch beasantry that Holland would not join the allies.

Burning of Belgian Towns. "The German excuse is that the burning of licigian towns and villages was done only as a punishment for attacks by civilians. Yet in case after case entire districts were burned found that the troops and followed the out apparently because of the stubborn resistance offered by the Helgian army. Take, for example, Belle, a place four miles from Ghent. Here a little force of 500 Belgian volunteers with two cannon successfully held up several thousand Germans for two hours and made them pay heavily in

"When the Germans entered the villagers; who knew too woll what their fate would be. The troops went lawyer's wife anxiously gave them her best, but when the dinner was over the house was burned with 50 other small houses.

Graves in Front of Kitchens.

"I stood to the village street after the Germans had gone as It was marked by the burning ruins. I noticed that the graves of the victims had been dug sometimes in front of their own kitchen doors. I had to ask not a fevered dream. The only crime of these people was that their village had been the sceno of a battle in which several German officers had been shot.

"I entered the rulns of a farmhouse where the eldest son, a lad of nineteen, had been shot before his mother and father's eyes, because the Germans thought he was old enough to be a soldier. The house was burned so thoroughly that not a dish, not a serap of wood and not an article worth five cents remained. A child had heen killed close by possibly by aceldent. With home gone, crops ruined and the eldest son dead, the family was so stupefied with grief that they scarcely could reply to my questions. "Down the roadway I could see mothers coming bnek, gazing distractedly at the ruins of their old homes, seeking for husbands and sons, fooring to ask for their daughters and in somu cases looking for their bahes and finding them in the ashes of death.

While Termonde Burned. "Not long afterward I stood in one German officers also made this their headquarters during the sack of the town, and they had marked on the lintel-the writing still remained-directions that the house was to be spared. While Termonde was burning they made holiday here. They found a gramophono and pienty of champagno. They seated themselves in the garden, played tunes, sang and drank to the crackling chorus of 1,600 burning homes. A woman who witnessed tho least said to me: These Germans are veritably without hearts.

"When the officers had gone tho camp followers, who neted as orderlies and hangers on around the army, burst open the door and ravaged the house. Every window was broken, almost every bit of glass shattored, the furniture simpshed, drawers pulled out and emptied, desks rausacked and cupboards laid bare. In the day nursery n children's toy drosser was forced open and rummagod. The playthings were thrown all around the nursery and books wore torn and hurled to difforent parts of the room. Everywhere in the house the Germans wrought havoc ovidently for the sheer pleasure of destroying.

FRENCH SOCIALISTS SEE WAR FOR HUMAN LIBERTY

French Socialists towards the war is and an end to European militarism. defined in the newspaper La Franco by a Socialist:

"Internationalism," he writes, "never meant the suppression of nationallty but an understanding between the their existence. Socialists realize that manity. That is why we have aban-victory for Germany would be tol-lowed by a rule of saher and spurred fense."

"I went to the Termonde art gallery, which a month ago was the pride of the district. Then it had a fine collection of Flemish pictures, now the entrances, corridors, and various rooms are a mass of charred woodwork, with here and there a head of a statuette or plaster, esst loft. One of the chlofs of the gallery enme lu while I was there and gazed at the wreck of the place which had been his life's pride.

The Wrongs of the People. "Termonde is a city of ghosts. It seemed impossible that street after street of crumbling ruins could a wook before have been a busy, pleasant, prosperous Belglan town. There was the church of the Bonedictine fathers with the roof off and the interior gutted and bernt. All that was left of. n massivo onk door wers the iron deliberately shattered with the butts of rilles before the place was set on fire. I noticed the figures at the stations of the cross with the heads of crowds smashed in.

"Melle and Termonde are typical of a large part of the country, but there nro exceptions. In some places the German soldiers carried out their orders to destroy houses with evident reluctance and did no more than they were ordered to do. Apart from burning liouses they behaved with mercy and kindliness. In other places I burning with a policy of deliberate outrage a policy which I believe the German people, if they could understand it, would repudiste and denounce. "The most patnful side of the bustness was the innumerable accounts of wholesale outrages against women, young girls and even children. One responsible official told me of some of the horrors and he was almost in tears as he spoke. 'Of these cases,' he said, we can tell, but of most of them we en, too, a woman hides her shams

The Policy of Terrorism. "Where does the responsibility for these doings lie? They are the direct outcome of the policy of the German general stnff, which decided on a polley of terror. It should be known that soldlers employed in burning and leoting are bound in part to get out of hand and follow the burning and looting with outrages that make all humanity recotl. But the Germans have defeated their own purpose. Out of the grief, agony and loss of the little people a new nation is arising. Two months ago Belgium lacked unity, and apparently all those great, inspiring forces which make a raco supremo. Germany has given her these. The people are being made great and strong by suffering. "As I wont among the Belgian armies during my journey I saw soldiers often poorly armed, unsultably dressed and not over well organized resisting great German regiments and my heart went out to thom. Cheery and unafraid, the officers and men greeted one everywhere. It was splendid beyond words.

Now Winter In at Hand.

"I wish I could say something that would bring home to the sympathetic and kindly American people the real need of Belgium. Today tens of thousands are still living torn from their homes and in sore distress. England la looking after many, but vast numbers remain without shelter, with little food and with everything gone. Winter is on them and unless somothing is done the frosts and snows of the coming weeks, the lack of food and the absence of elothing will complete the work the Germans hegan.

"I may seem to speak strongly. I toll you that any decent man who saw the saturnalia of cruelty and passion In that devastated land could not woll Bay less."

German Schoolboys at Front.

London,-A dispatch to the Exchange Tolegraph company from Bordeaux assorts that boys under slxteen yoars old are fighting in the German ranks. The correspondent declares he saw one wounded in the Bordenux hospital whose ago was fitteen years and nine months and who told him that all pupils at school over fifteen had been mobilized and placed in different regiments.

Death for Selling Newspapers. "Pick it Up."

Habits formed in childhood are usually lasting. With that Idea as a basis the playground and school authorities in Rochester have placed signs conspicuously located on tha playgrounds on which are displayed those words, "Pick it up." The idea is to have the children clear away the disorder they create during play befere they leave the grounds. The plan is reported to have shown immediate results. It has been possible to dispense with the caretaker of the grounds. The boys and girls leave the grounds in perfect condition. No waste paper is left scattered about, no playthings are out of place, all is snugged up for closing before the crowd of rollicking youngsters leave their playground. It is just as easy to teach children to he ordarly as to be disorderly.

This and the etery of the tragedy she forbids the girl ever to tell. She offers Hetty a home, friendship and security from peril on account of the tragedy. Mrs. Sara Wrandall and Hetty attend the funeral of Challis Wrandall at the home of his parents. Sara Wrandall and Helty return to New York after an absence of a year to Europe. Leelie Wrandall, brother of Challis, makes himself useful to Sara and becomes greatly loterested in Hetty. Sara sees in Leslie's infatuation possibility for revenge on the Wrandalls and reparation for the wrongs she suffered at the hands of Challis Wrandall by marrying his murderess into the family. Leslie, in company with his friend Brandon Booth, an pany with his friend Brandon Booth, an artist, visits Sara at her country place. The confesses to Sara that he is madir we with Hetty.

Booth caught the angry flash in her eyes, preceding the flush and unaccountable paller that followed almost immediately. He felt guilty, and at marking: the same time deeply annoyed with Leslie. Later on he tried to explain, but the attempt was a lamentable fallure. She laughed, not unkindly, in his face.

Leslie had refused to allow the sketch to leave his hand. If she could have gained possession of it, even for an instant, the thing would have been torn to bits. But it went back into his commodious pocketbook, and she was too proud to demand it of him.

The next morning at ten he was at Southlook, arranging his easel and canvas in the north end of the long living room, where the light from the tall French windows afforded abundant and well-distributed light for the enterprise in hand. Hotty had not yet appeared. Dimly he could see the faint smile of interest on her lips.

Hetty came in, calm, serene and ovellor than ever in the clear morning light. She was wearing the simple white gown he had enosen the day hefore. If she was conscious of the rather intense scrutiny ho bestowed upon her as she gave him her hand in greeting, she did not appear to he in the least disturbed.

He draw a long breath, and she looked up quickly. What he saw in her honest blue eyes convicted her.

Sara Wrandall came into the room at that moment. Hetty hastily closed the magazine and held it hehind her. Booth had intended to show the reproduction to Mrs. Wrandall, but the girl's hehavior caused him to change his mind. He felt that he possessed a secret that could not be shared with Sara Wrandall, then or afterward. Morcover, he decided that he would not refer to the Hawkright pictures again unless the girl hersolf brought up the subject. All this flashed through his mind as he stepped forward, to greet the newcomer.

When he turned again to Hetty, the magazine had disappeared. He never saw it afterward, and, what is more to. the point, he never asked her to produce it.

He thought hard over the situation. The ohvious solution came to him: She had been at one time reduced to the necessity of posing, a circumstance evidently known to but few and least of all to Sara Wrandall, from whom the girl plainly meant to keep the truth. This conviction distressed him, managing a cigarette. He was con- but not in the way that might have sclous of the fact that her lazy, half- been expected. He had no scruples alort gaze was upon him all the time, shout sharing the secret or in keeping the fear that Mrs. Wrandall might hear of all this from other and perhaps ungentle sources. As for her posing for Hawkright, it meant little or nothing to him. In his own experience, two girls of gentle birth had served as models for pictures of his own making, and he fully appreciated the exigencies that had driven them to it. One had posed in the "altogother." She was a girl of absolutely irreproachable character, who afterward married a chap he knew very well, and who was fully aware of that chart phase in her life. That feature of the situation meant nothing to him. He was in no doubt concerning Hetty. She was what she appeared to be: A gen-

He invariably brought these deliberations to a close by relaxing into a grim smile of amusement, as much as to say: "Serve him right, anyway. Trust him

Uncle Sam's Marine Band Is Now 116 Years Old

WASHINGTON -A recent writer, in discoursing about the Marine band, says that it came into being 116 years age, when President John Adams approved an act establishing it as a permanent organization. The original law provided for a fife and drum corps, consisting of 16 drummers and same number of fifers, one of whom was to act as fife-major. This aggregation of musicians constituted the

An old tradition, has it that the count one Captain McNell of the frigate Boston was cruising in the Mediterranean when an Irresistible longing for some real music came over him. While ashore he was delighted and pleased with the performance of a Siellian regimental band and at once conceived a plan for insuring plenty of music during the remainder of the voyage. He at ence hlandly invited the musicians on board his vessel for the ostensible purpose of playing for a ball. Probably induced by the prespect of receiving a liberal compensation, the members of the hand accepted the invitation with algerity.

Soon after the musicians with their instruments and gone on board Captain McNell suddenly found it necessary to holst unchor and get under way for the United States. The Sicilians protested, but in vain; the music-leving captain carried them hodily off and was entertained by their playing all

No authentic record showing what finally became of these Italian musiclans is now, in existence, as many of the Marine corps archives were destroyed in 1814. It is shown, however, in official records that shortly after the organization of the Marine corps Lieutenant Colonel Henderson brought from Napies a group of 13 Italian musicinus, whose addition to the organization made of it an instrumental oand.

> How Many Shots Will Bn Fired? The number of rounds that will be fired during an ordinary battle can cost little to keep and that their milk only he imagined. We have data from is in some respects superior to that the Russo-Japanese war showing that at Liaopan one battery fired 2,800 rounds in one day, while another fired 3,304 roun making for each gun about 413 ounds in one day. This was not an uncommon occurrence, and it shows the expense involved in carrying on a modern war.

The most common projectite of the three-inch caltbor is the shrapnol which is in their a gun, arranged by time fuses so that at the destred height it will be made to burst, shooting forward out of a shell 250 had balls, each offective to kill a minu. Scientific American Corn-on-the-Cob.

Say what you will about observing the rules of etiquette in aubjugating the first rossting ear of the season, but to our mind there is really only one way to do it and that is the oldfashioned way-right off the cob just as nature ir ended for it to be eaten. This process of extracting the sweet and tender kernels is hound to give you the benefit of an exceptionally rich and delictous flavor found only on corn-on-the-cob. And let us give warning against expanding the mouth over more than three rowe at a time. It's a dangerous practica.

Gentle Reminder.

A gentleman, on a vieit to another city, entered a restaurant, and or leaving took away with him by mis take a hat belonging to another man The bats were so nearly identical that the mistake was not detected, and the surprise of the gentleman may be im agined whon, reaching home, he glanced at the lining of the hat and found written there, the words, "You darned fool, what did you take this hat for?"-Lippincott's.
